Nyíradony

1. Attractions

Gúti church ruins

In the middle of the sprawling Gúti Forest ranging all the way to the outskirts of Nyírac nád, located 25-30 kilometres east of Debrecen, a clearing marked by a sign along the Nyíradony motorway indicates the remains of an Árpád Period settlement. Based on the uncovered base walls, the 8.8-metre long and 6.9-metre wide nave was accompanied by a 5.6-metre long and 4.7-metre wide apse and a 5.6-metre long and 2.9-metre wide sacristy.

The remaining wall sections were divided by narrow window openings with a tapered design inside and outside alike with a width of barely 8 centimetres and height of 71 centimetres. These most likely featured stained glass windows or functioned as hide-less illuminating slits. The bricks fired with straw or brushwood are of good quality, many of which are so-called iron bricks in various colours with a glazed surface.

The monastery of the Gutkeled clan consecrated in honour of the Blessed Virgin was built in the 13th century and remained in use for nearly three hundred years. The Mongol hordes aiding the Turkish forces pillaged the region in 1594, which led to the downfall of the village which was finally abandoned in 1660.

The depopulation sealed the fate of the church. The first archaeological exploration of the church took place in 1975, whilst the conservation works and additions to the ruins were completed by 1995.

Zsuzsi narrow gauge railway memorial site

On 31.08.1977, the MÁV Debrecen Narrow Gauge Railway was shut down and in memory of the removed tracks, a C-50 engine was put on display close to the former Nyírac nád station for the 20th anniversary of the line's closure.

The C-50 engine (GV 3784 trck. no.) was sourced from the MÁV Balatonfenyves station after external renovation. The site is located close to the road connecting Nyírac nád with Nyíradony, after the village of Asszonyrész, to the right in a bus driveway at the edge of the Gúti Forest.

For the 30th anniversary, the so-called Zsuzsi Engine collective carried restoration painting and upkeep works on the engine.

The Zsuzsi engine is dear to the people of Nyírac nád, who supported the previous plans to restore the line.

Birth of the Mother of God Greek Catholic church

The time of the establishment of the parish is unknown, with its priest first mentioned in 1686. Following the Rákóczi War of Independence, the Kállay family settled a large Greek Orthodox population in the area. Its church was built in 1734 – according to the subsequent documentation – as an adobe structure covered with shingles, consecrated by vicar Mihály Olsay and fitted with the necessary trappings. The construction of the new stone church commenced between 1780 and 1785, funded by the faithful. According to other sources, the church was only completed in 1794. The condition of the Baroque church deteriorated to such an extent by the early 20th century that it required major restoration that was carried out in 1913. The Baroque vault was demolished and a flat ceiling was raised instead before expanding the nave towards the east, creating a new apse and sacristy. The murals were painted by Gyula Ádám in 1917. The iconostasis was carved by János Guczogó in the late 19th century with images painted by Kornél Gyula Fenczik. The mural was restored in 1956 and the wooden fittings were repeatedly restored. In the 1970s, the apse was further expanded in the northern direction. The outer eastern wall of the expanded structure and the sacristy feature Zsolt Maklár's frescoes of Christ on the Throne and the Mother of God.

Calvinist church

The church was built in the 20th century. The church's two ministers were unable to complete the construction as both of them were punished by being moved to a different town. The church never featured benches, only chairs until 1998. The congregation of St. Gallen in Switzerland donated the benches for the church. The church's full-scale renovation was carried out between 1993 and 2001.

Roman Catholic church (Saint Stephen I parish of Ciumești)

The parish existed as early as the 13th century, yet was dissolved at the time of the Reformation. It served as the filial church of first Mezőfény and then Szaniszló. It again became an independent parish in 1840. The church was rebuilt in 1815 before suffering damage from an earthquake in 1834. The church was renovated in 1854-56. The church's organ was installed in 1867. The altarpiece and three other images were painted by József Mezei. The 15x10-metre ceiling image was painted by Magda Lukácsovits in 1960. The interior of the church was repainted in 1984, whilst its external renovation took place in 1985.

Calvinist church

The church originates from the Middle Ages and has a polygonal apse with massive buttresses supporting the church just as at the corners of the nave. Its original windows were reconfigured. The entire church has a flat ceiling with a single chancel arch. Its original furnishings were destroyed with only its carved pulpit remaining whilst its former crown was fashioned in 1763 by Zsigmond of the Csomaközy family, named after the settlement. According to the inscription on the inside of the crown, it was replaced during the renovation in 1841 after the earthquake of 1834 by the current crown. The stone wall surrounding the building was most probably also built in the Middle Ages. The wooden tower connected to the western façade of the church, which also functions as a foyer, was built in 1831. The church features no bells.

Calvinist church

The church built in the 13th century was consecrated in honour of the Holy Spirit. The original floor plan of the small-size building is not known as the eastern sections were demolished and significantly expanded in 1733. This led to the current floor plan of the – now Calvinist – church, which was further expanded in 1830 with a large-size western auxiliary space and a tower connected to the western façade. Explorations of the wall revealed a western chancel – in the location of the current wooden chancel – that was walled up. Researchers also found the remains of murals on the medieval wall surfaces from the 13th and 14th centuries. The section found in the best condition featured a depiction of the so-called Cloaked Mary.

Saint Joseph Calasanz Roman Catholic church and parish

The Saint Joseph Calasanz church is also known as the “Great Church of Nagykároly”. The building has close ties to the history and faith of the city and its environs. The first written document mentioning the Catholic church of Nagykároly dates from 1264. In 1727, Piarists settled in Nagykároly and took over the management of the parish, under the support of Count Sándor Károlyi. The construction of the current church commenced in 1769. After the state dissolution of the monastic orders in 1949, the Piarist monks led the parish as diocese priests until the death of the last Piarist vicar, Dr. László Gyulai in 1983. The church was renovated in 1986-88 and subsequently in 2013. The restoration of the exterior of the church took place in 2016.

Archangels Michael and Gabriel Orthodox church

The Greek Catholic church was built in 1738, on the site of a previous wooden church for Ruthenian Greek Catholics at the expense of Demeter Rácz, governor of the Károlyis. Its unique floor plan and façade was most likely modelled after the church of Máriapócs. The earthquake of 1834 greatly damaged the structure along with the Romanian church next to it. The iconostasis features the works of János Hippo from 1857.

Archangel Michael church

The Greek Catholic church built in 1739 was seriously damaged during the 1834 earthquake, yet the congregation quickly restored the building. An additional round of renovation works became necessary by 1888 and the pulpit and altar were most probably procured at this time as well, along with the decorative painting of the dome. The windows of the northern and southern walls of the nave facing the main entrance were most probably walled up during the 19th century reconstruction works as well, along with the southern side-entrance and the southern stairwell leading to the chancel behind the southern tower. The latest round of renovation works were completed in 1967 and 1973.

Our Lady of Fatima Roman Catholic church

It appeared necessary to build a new church in the block-building quarter created in the 1970s. This only became possible after the political changes took place. The construction commenced in 1991, based on plans designed by engineer Tibor Günther. The furnishings of the sanctuary were designed by Magda H. Lukácsovits. The Fatima statue was a grant of the World Apostolate of Fatima. The church was consecrated on 12 October 1996 by Bishop Pál Reizer and two years later, it was consecrated as the diocese's church of worship. On 1 August 1999, the church was raised to a parish status. On 23 September 1999, the site became the Romanian World Apostolate of Fatima centre.
